TRADE MARKS, TRADE NAMES OR BRANDS

This is a list of trade marks or brand names used in Canada showing type of products and names of Canadian manufacturers using them. We believe this list to be as comprehensive as any such list published in Canada. We have made every effort to be accurate. However, we are relying on the good faith of the companies that have voluntarily submitted the information and we are not in a position to verify the accuracy of these submissions. The trade marks listed are not necessarily registered in the Trade Marks Office under the Trade Marks Act. In cases where two or more companies are listed as using the same trade mark for similar products, we will delete a duplicate trade mark whenever the exclusive owner provides us with legal proof of his exclusive ownership. Under no circumstances can legal responsibility be assumed by the Canadian Trade Index and/or The Canadian Manufacturers' Association for any errors, omissions or duplications in these listings.

What is a Trade Mark?

It's a mark used to distinguish the wares or services sold, leased, hired or performed by one person from those of another. If you want to protect that mark against infringement you must register it in accordance with the provisions of the Trade Marks Act. The trade mark that would distinguish one line of wares or services from another may be a picture, a label, a package, a container, the shape of the article or simply a word or series of words. Since the use of words is the most common method of distinguishing one item or service from another, words registered as trade marks are often referred to somewhat loosely as "trade names" or "brand names". However, a trade name generally means the name under which a business is carried on. Because of the possibility of confusion, the safe and accepted legal term is simply "trade mark".

Do You Have to Register Your Trade Mark?

No, you do not have to register your trade mark with the Federal Trade Marks Office but if someone else uses the same or a confusingly similar trade mark you will not be able to sue for infringement. You would, nevertheless, if not registered, have recourse against the infringer if you could prove that the defendant was attempting to pass off his goods or services as if they were yours. If your trade mark was registered, all you would have to do is prove that the same or similar mark was actually used and was confusing with yours.

Registration, furthermore, enables you to legally stop any act or activity that depreciates the goodwill value of your registration. The registered mark is also incontestable after five years. This means that if prior use of the trade mark was unknown to you at the time you obtained registration, the aggrieved party cannot obtain its cancellation once the five years period has elapsed.

What Trade Marks Are Registrable?

The general rule is that subject to certain exceptions you can register any trade mark that (a) has been in use or has been made known, (b) that is distinctive and (c) that will not be susceptible of confusion with other trade marks. This general rule, however, has many provisos because of the court's interpretation of the Trade Marks Act, and various International Trade Mark Conventions.

"Use" means to sell in normal trade in such a way that notice of the association of a trade mark with the wares is at that time given to the purchaser. Simply giving advance publicity does not constitute use. The sale of samples bearing the trade mark is not deemed to be use "in the normal course of trade" and is thus insufficient for registration purposes. A trade mark is not distinctive if used by more than one person unless, of course, the other person was properly licensed by the registered trade mark owner. Even if the mark was originally distinctive it may have lost distinctiveness prior to your application for registration if the name has fallen into the language and become essentially descriptive of the product.

Once Registered, Keep Your Trade Mark Alive

A registered trade mark lasts only as long as it is used but "using" has its own particular meaning in trade mark law. A trade mark must be used strictly as a trade mark. For example, be wary of how you use it in an advertising context. Remember that a trade mark is to distinguish your wares or services from those of another. If you use your mark in advertising as though it symbolised a class of merchandise you are not "using" your trade mark. Still worse, you might be inviting the public to apply a new meaning to what you thought was your own distinguishing trade mark so that it falls into the language and becomes essentially descriptive of the class of product. Once the latter position is reached your trade mark may no longer be registrable.

BEWARE:

THE SUBJECT OF TRADE MARKS IS A SPECIALIZED ONE. EXPERTS IN THIS FIELD ARE COMMONLY KNOWN AS TRADE MARK ATTORNEYS OR AGENTS. SEEK THEIR ADVICE BEFORE MAKING DECISIONS.

To discover how to count parts more quickly and accurately...

Read between the lines!
Nothing is too small to count

Setra's prepackaged counting scale/bar code labelling systems eliminate sampling, when kitting parts and when taking inventory.

Using Setra's high capacity (up to 140 lbs.), high resolution (1 part in 750,000) parts counting scales, and our state-of-the-art cycle scanner or decoder, average piece weights can be instantly, and accurately, scanned into the scale to initiate counting. The result is a complete inventory control system designed to automate receiving, distribution, and cycle counting operations.

So read between the lines! The message is unmistakable. For efficient inventory control, there's only one answer...

One [illegible] we can solve is keeping your page for you with this detachable bookmark.

The expertise, knowledge and experience of ORTECH (formerly Ontario Research Foundation) has provided critical problem-solving for thousands of Canadian Industries over the last 60 years. Here are some of our most recent successes:

New Flyer Industries Limited

New Flyer Industries needed computer aided engineering in the design and qualification of new bus products.

Applying computer based analytical and experimental resources coupled with extensive past experience, ORTECH was able to determine allowable design stresses to accommodate the effects of bus manoeuvering, passenger load, road surface and dynamic variations that would occur over the life of the bus, as well as road testing a well-qualified prototype.

According to Anton Plieger, Executive Vice-President, "ORTECH is the furthest ahead in North America in applying CAE to bus design. In fact, we are now using ORTECH to test our new European model, instead of the lab we used in the past in Holland."

Domal Industries

The combination of higher shipping and production costs was dulling the competitive edge of Domal Industries, a small Canadian company wishing to access the giant U.S. floating dock market. Company president Fred Svirklys had an idea which would drastically reduce production costs, but he needed technical assistance to carry it through.

Working closely with the ORTECH materials team, Svirklys was able to evolve a process using microwave energy to expand polystyrene instead of more expensive polyurethane in the cavity of floating dock units. Within weeks after entering production, the Canadian company won a $10 million contract with a major supplier of commercial docks in the U.S.

"Getting a big piece of a multi-million dollar market is an excellent return on a $20,000 investment," Svirklys explained, "but without ORTECH, I wouldn't have been able to do it."

Walbar Canada Inc.

For parts suppliers to the aerospace industry, like Walbar Canada Inc., qualifying the integrity of the raw materials that go into super alloy parts, presents an imposing challenge. It is imperative that they, as a manufacturer of high-quality jet engine parts for Europe and the U.S., achieve mandatory quality levels.

The testing of each small lot of raw material must include chemical analysis, physical tests, metallographic evaluation and stress and creep rupture tests.

As John Anderson, Director of Quality Assurance puts it, "Ideally, qualification of material should be done in-house. Failing that, I like it done close by and by one facility. ORTECH is near to our company and can do almost all the testing required."

ORTECH guarantees a critical average turnaround time plus a report distilling all the data from several hundred hours of testing down to a concise two pages.

Exhibit 1

Real Gross National Product

(percent change)

	1987	1988	1989
Canada	4.0	4 ¼	3
United States	3.4	3 ¾	3
Japan	4.3	5 ¾	4 ½
Germany	1.8	3 ¾	2 ½
OECD Europe	2.8	3 ½	3
Total OECD	3.3	4	3 ¼

Source: OECD

The OECD projects economic growth among industrial countries to average 3.25 per cent in 1989 down from 4 per cent in 1988. This suggests that export opportunities for Canadian manufacturers in non-North American export markets will improve. A slow down in North America does not mean a world-wide recession. A major concern is the outlook for inflation which is expected to remain high in North America.

Exhibit 2

Canadian Balance of Payments

($ Billions)

	1987	1988	1989
Exports	97.8	116	129
Imports	89.1	107	119
Trade Balance	8.8	9	10
Net Service Transfers	−16.1	−16	−20
Current Account Balance	−8.0	−8	−10

Source: OECD

The current account deficit will slip further in 1989 as the net outflow in investment income and services are greater than the improvement in the merchandise trade balance. However, if growth in the U.S. economy is substantially below the forecasted 3 per cent our current account balance could be worse and will put pressure on both the exchange rate and interest rates.

Exhibit 3

Canadian Economic Outlook

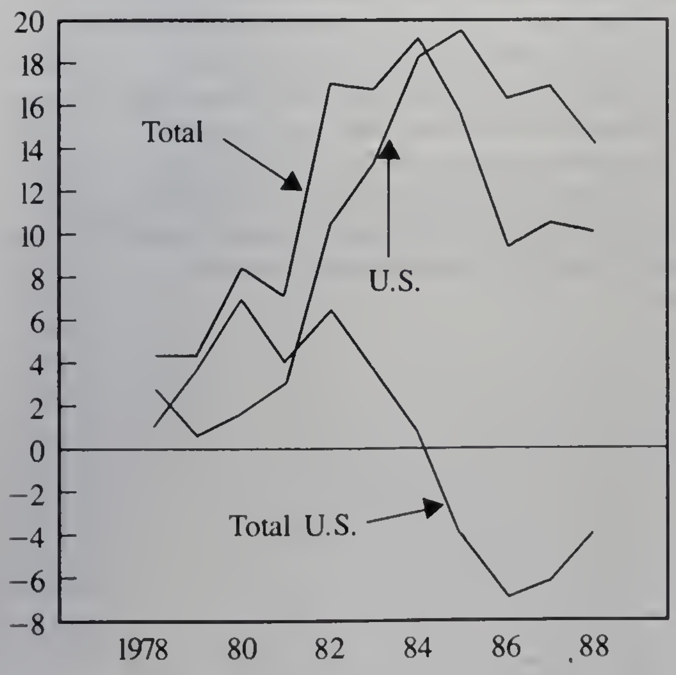
	1987	1988	1989
Real Gross Domestic Product (% change)	4.0	4.2	2.5
Consumer Price Index (% change)	4.5	4.2	4.5
Interest Rate — Prime Business (End of Year)	9.75	11.75	10.5
Exchange Rate (U.S. Cents Year End)	76.8	82-85	79-83
Unemployment Rate (%)	8.9	7.9	8.0
Housing Start (000)	246	210	180
Pre-Tax Corporate Profits (% change)	24	15.0	7.0
Capital Investment (% change)	11.8	20.5	10.0

If interest rates stabilize and inflationary pressures remain modest we do not perceive a recession in 1989, just slower economic growth; 2.5 per cent compared with 4.2 per cent in 1988. The strength in capital investment and exports will offset slower growth in consumer spending, housing construction and exports to the U.S. Although monetary policy is doing the job to contain inflation, interest rates and the Canadian-U.S. exchange rate are approaching potentially damaging levels. Real interest rates are now close to early 1980 levels.

Exhibit 4

Merchandise Trade Balance

($ Billions)



The decline in the value of the Canadian dollar against most other major currencies has given a strong boost to non-U.S. exports. In fact, if it were not for increased exports to countries other than the U.S. our overall merchandise trade balance would be down by almost 3 to 4 billion dollars in 1988, significantly worsening our current account deficit.

Manufacturing

Exhibit 5

Manufacturing Outlook

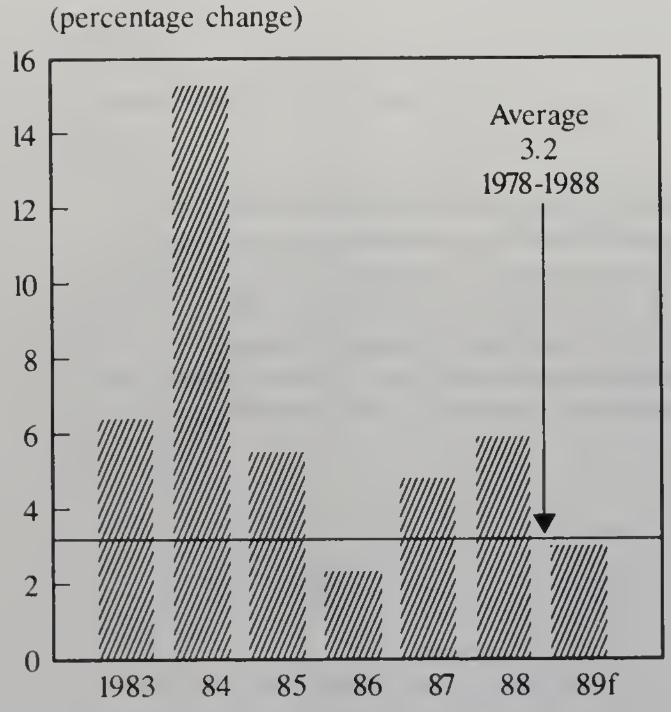
	1987	1988	1989
Real Gross Domestic Product (% change)	4.8	6.50	3.0
Capital Investment (% change)	4.9	28.1	10.0
Manufacturing Shipments (% change)	6.2	8.6	5.5
Industry Selling Price (% change)	2.7	4.4	3.5

The outlook in 1989 is for much slower growth of 3.0 per cent. The extent of the slowdown will depend on how consumers reacted to interest rates in both Canada and the U.S. Slower growth in domestic demand in the U.S. would impact most heavily on manufacturing in Canada which depends on the U.S. market for 80 per cent of its exports. Increased demand for manufactured goods has translated into modest upward pressure on industry selling prices. Price increases should ease off to about 3.5 per cent in 1989 compared to 4.4 per cent in 1988 as a result of a higher exchange rate and rising commodity prices. Improving profit margins and cash flow are the major factors contributing to an aggressive capital spending program that will continue in 1989.

Exhibit 6

Manufacturing Production

(percentage change)

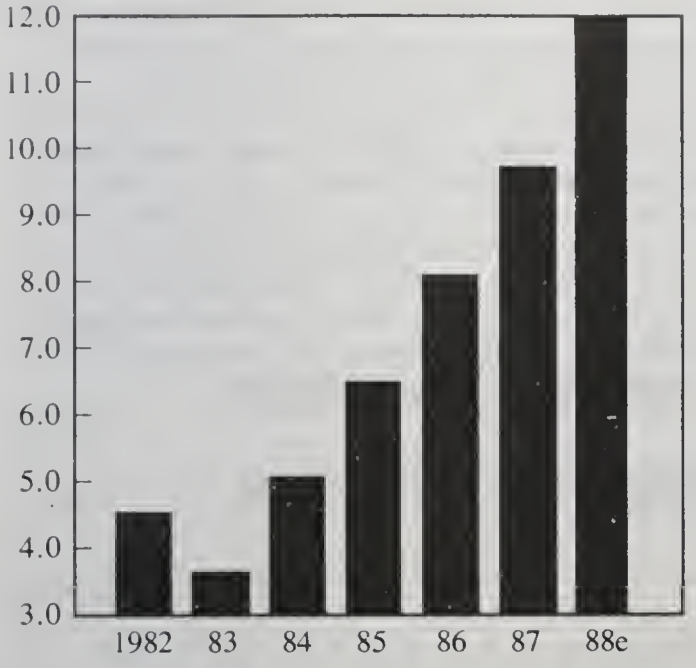


The stock market crash in October 1987 set the stage in 1988 for cautious optimism and modest economic performance in the manufacturing sector. To defy capital markets the manufacturing sector turned in a respectable performance increasing output by 6 per cent. In 1989 the high interest and a high Canada/U.S. exchange rate will cut the growth in manufacturing production by half to 3 per cent. Exports to countries other than the U.S. will continue to be strong off-setting slower growth in exports to the U.S. and a weaker domestic economy.

Exhibit 7

Building Permits — Industrial and Commercial

($ Billions)



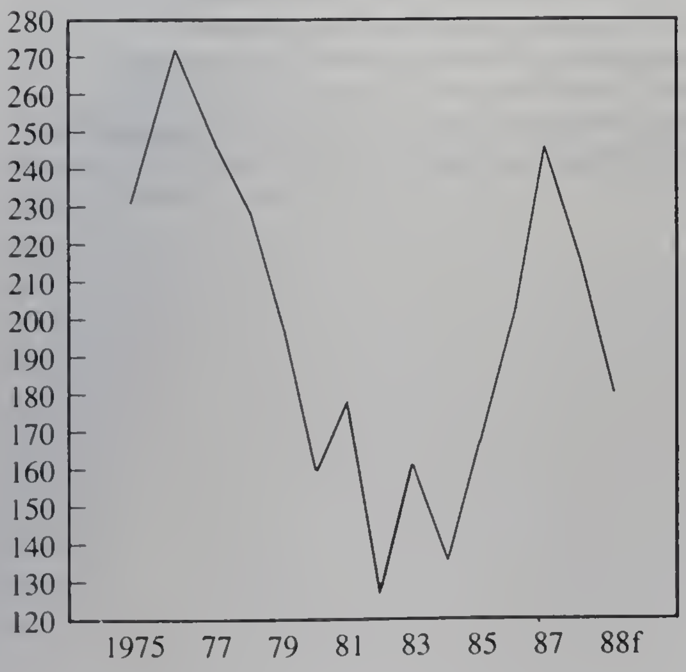
Notes: e = estimate

The strong growth in building permits in the past five years has reinforced growth in a number of key manufacturing sectors, such as wood furniture, concrete and cement, plastics. Even though housing starts are expected to slow in 1989 commercial and industrial development will continue to expand.

Exhibit 8

Housing Starts

(thousands)



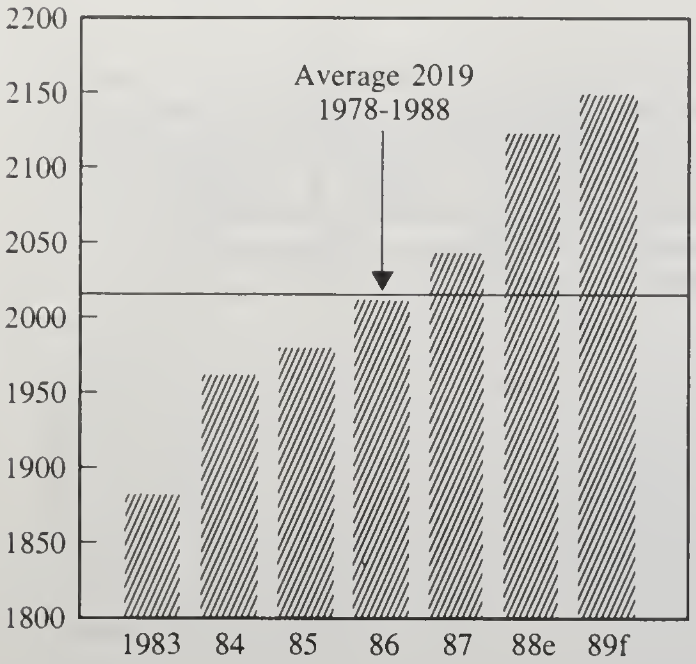
Notes: f = forecast

Interest rates will be the key factor in 1989 lowering the overall level of housing starts to around 180,000 starts. If interest rates continue to rise housing starts will be lower than projected. Higher interest rates and substantial increases in housing prices have reduced housing affordability. Declining growth in this sector will impact in a broad range of manufacturing industries since many consumer related decisions are affected by new house purchases and the resale housing market.

Exhibit 9

Manufacturing Employment

(thousands)



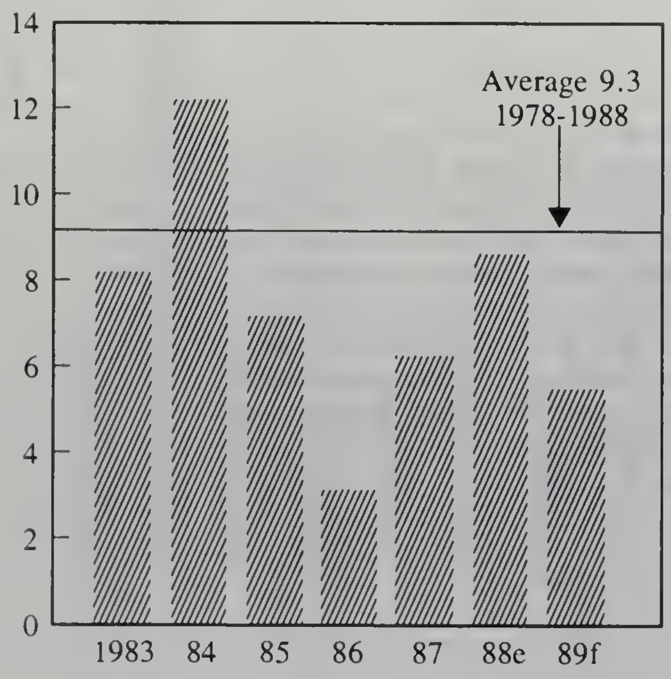
Notes: e = estimate, f = forecast

Even though manufacturing employment has increased consecutively since 1982 manufacturing employment is only back to the level it was in 1981. In many manufacturing industries plants are operating at capacity, although companies are still cautious about increasing employment. In 1989 we are anticipating only one per cent increase in employment as concern about slower economic growth increases. Moreover, contracting out of service related functions within manufacturing and significant productivity gains will mean slow growth in manufacturing employment.

Exhibit 10

Manufacturing Shipments

(percent change)

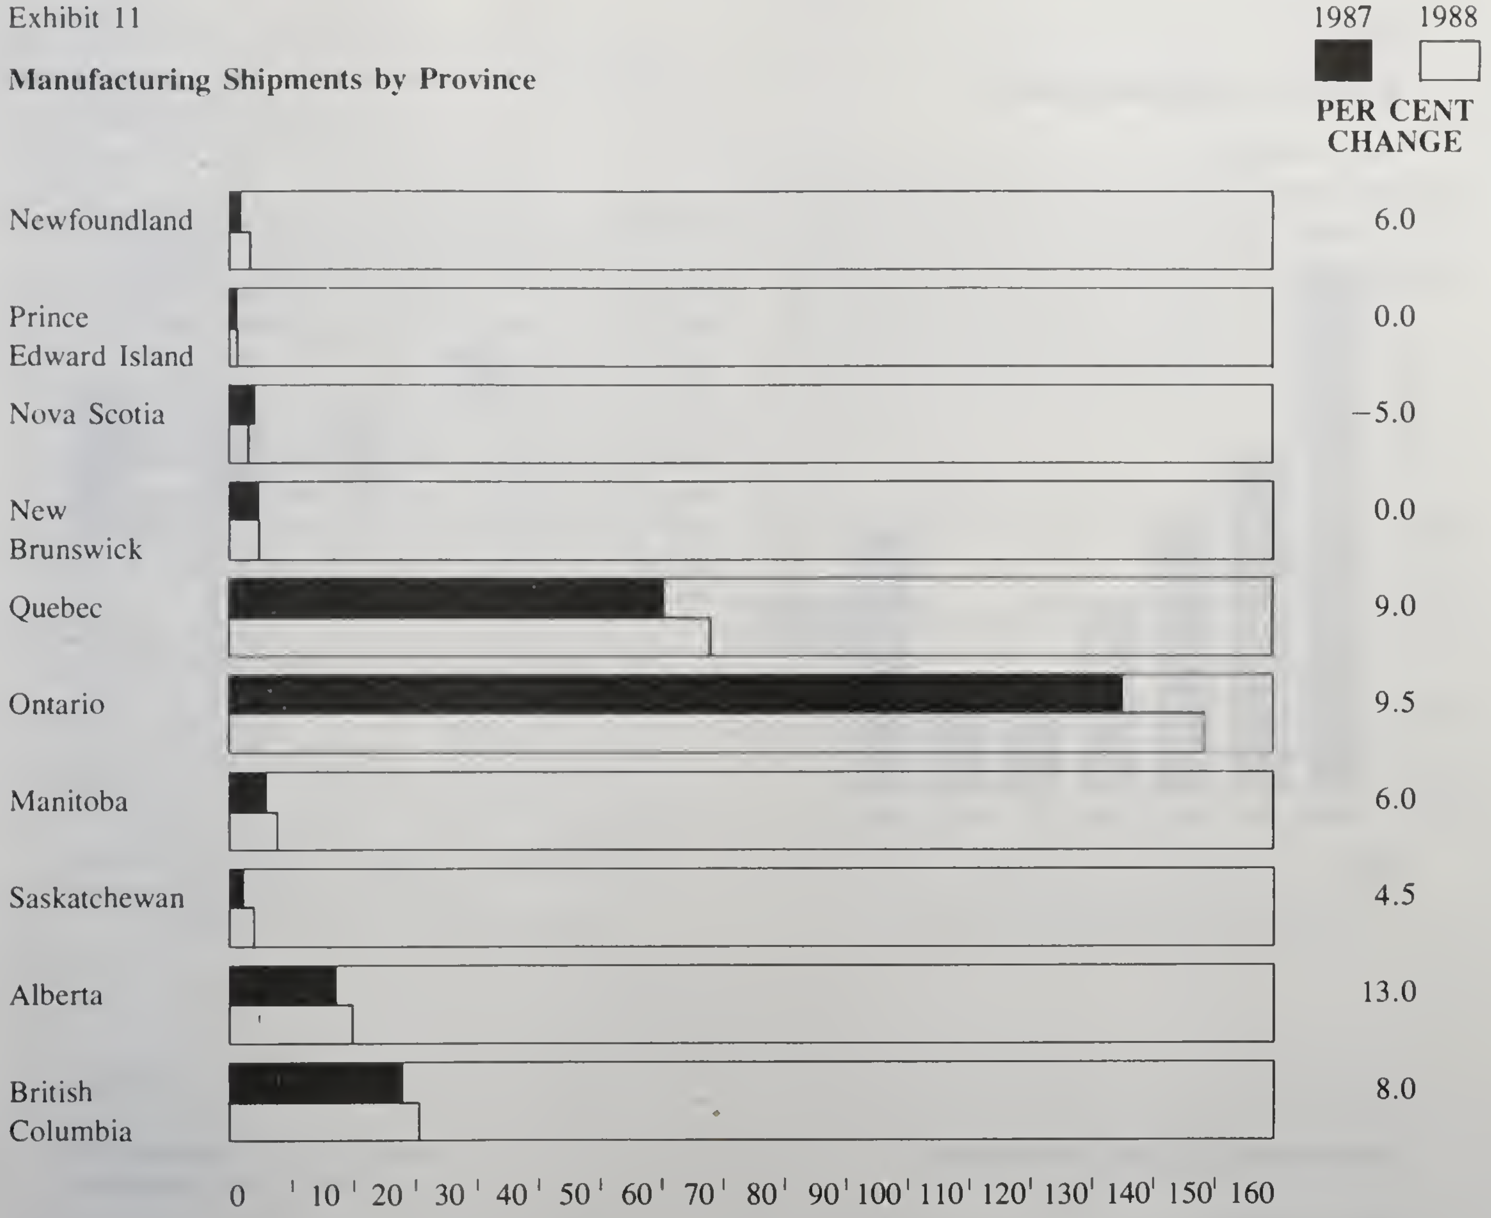


Notes: e = estimate, f = forecast, *Based on Sales.
Source: CMA Economics Department
(based upon data from Statistics Canada)

The outlook for 1989 is for modest growth in manufacturing shipments. Industries that will continue to show a good performance are transportation, chemicals, plastics and pulp and paper. Sectors that will grow less robust are non-metallic minerals, wood products and textiles and petro chemical products.

Exhibit 11

Manufacturing Shipments by Province



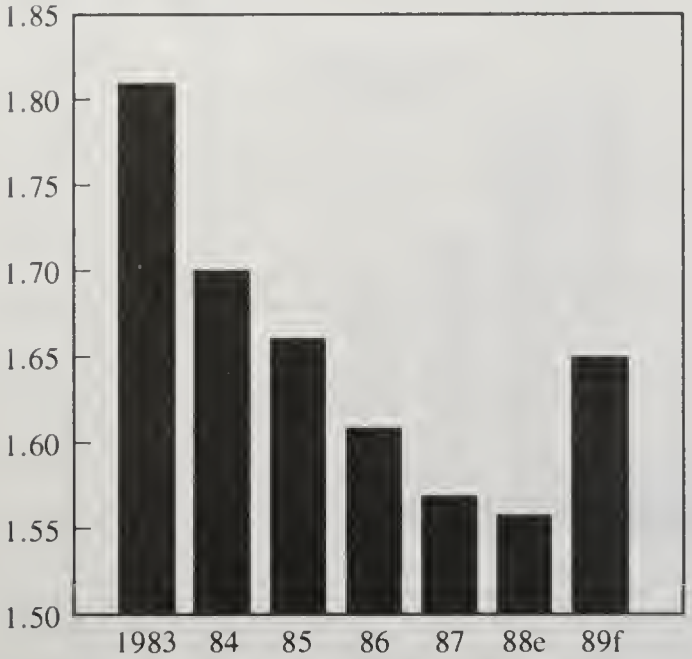
Source: CMA Economics Department
(Based on data from Statistics Canada)

Manufacturing activity provincially is concentrated in Quebec and Ontario with Ontario accounting for half of the total manufacturing shipments in Canada. Beside Quebec and Ontario manufacturing's shipments have been strong in Alberta and British Columbia.

Exhibit 12

Inventory to Shipments Ratio

(percent change)



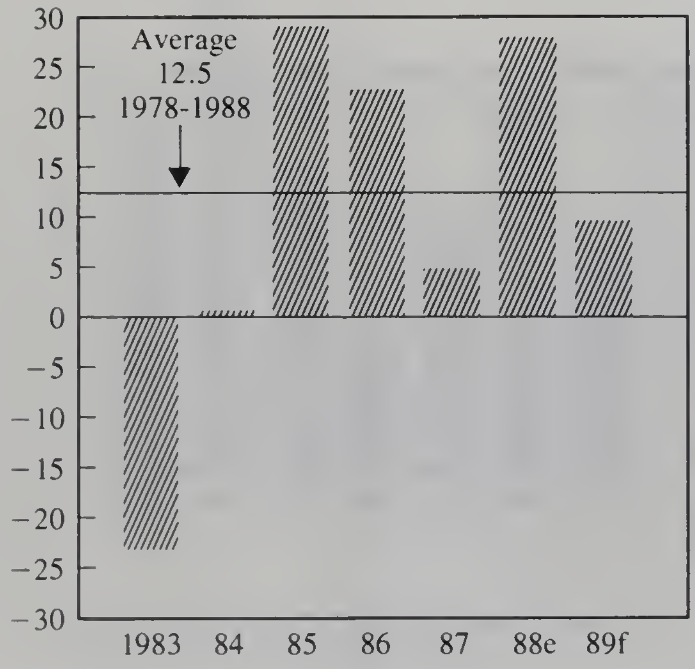
Notes: e = estimate, f = forecast, *Based on Sales.
Source: CMA Economics Department
(based upon data from Statistics Canada)

By 1988 the inventory to shipments ratio reached its lowest level since the recession. Cost cutting measures, better inventory management and the application of new technology processes have all added to better inventory control. Although this ratio will move upward in response to slower economic growth in 1989 a ratio of 1.65 is still substantially below the high of 1982 of 2.2. Before inventories get significantly out of line we are more likely to see changes in employment levels if economic conditions worsen from current expectations.

Exhibit 13

Manufacturing Capital Investment

(percent change)

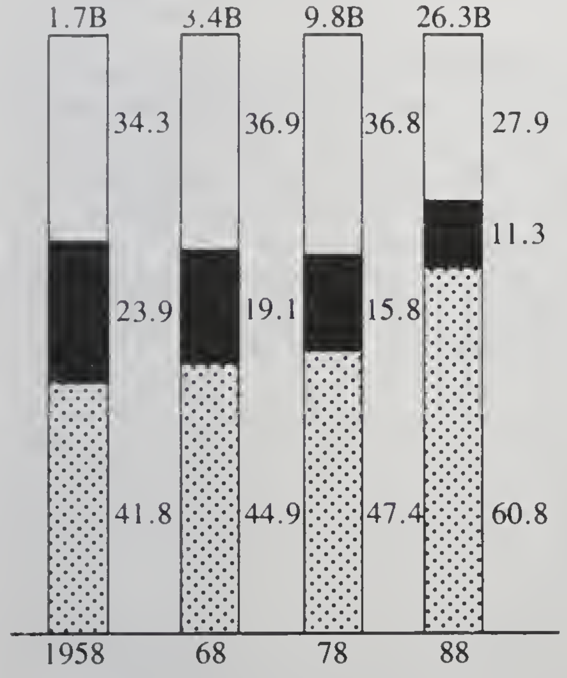


Manufacturing is in the process of a major capital investment cycle. During the past four years manufacturers have put in place sixty billion dollars of new capital investment. The Canada/U.S. free trade agreement is anticipated to increase capital investment into the 1990's. The slowdown in growth in capital investment in 1989 reflects cost price pressures, a high Canada/U.S. exchange rate and higher interest rates.

Exhibit 14

Changing Mix in Manufacturing Investment

(percentage distribution)



Notes: e = estimate, f = forecast, *Based on Sales.
Source: CMA Economics Department
(based upon data from Statistics Canada)

The capital investment needs of the manufacturing sector are changing. In the fifties manufacturers were investing in new plants, today they are concentrating investment in machinery and equipment. In 1958 machinery and equipment invested accounted for 41 per cent of all investment, today it is up over 60 per cent.

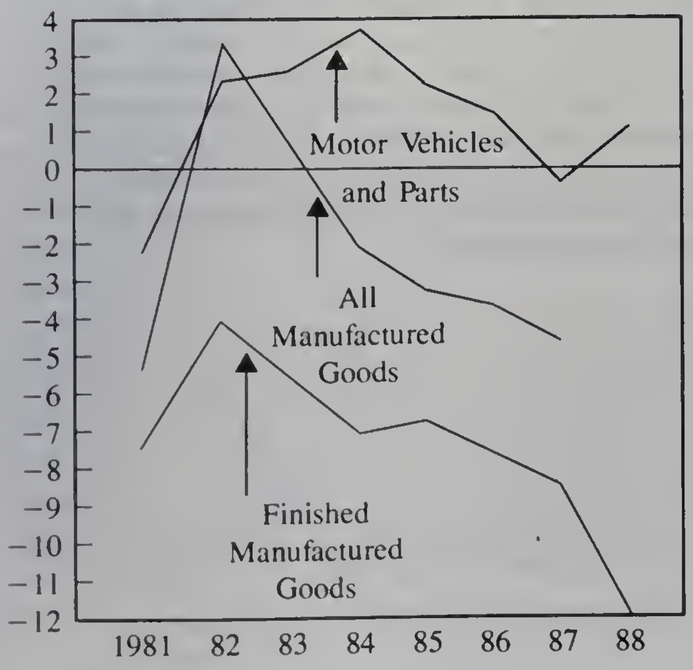
Exhibit 15

Merchandise Trade Balance Manufactured Goods

($ Billions)



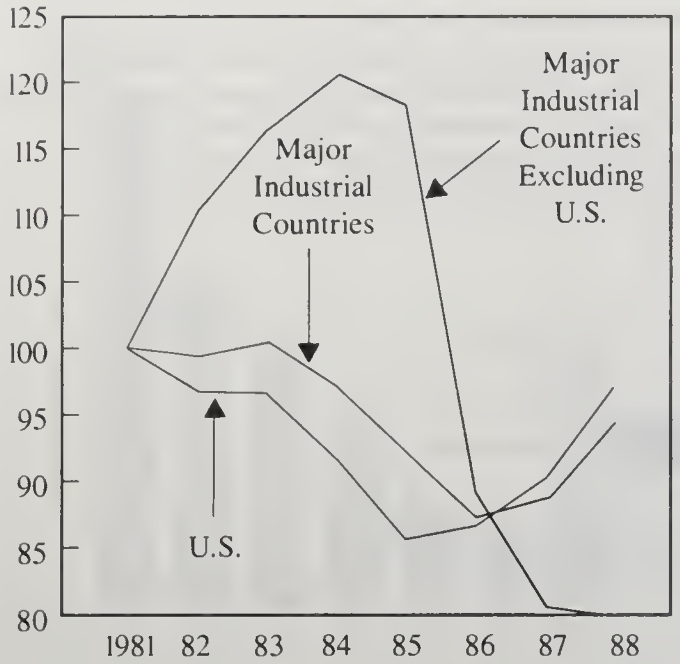
The trade balance for manufactured goods for 1988 was in deficit $3 billion. The trade balance of unfinished manufactured goods continued to worsen and is in deficit about $12 billion. If it were not for the significant turn-around in trade flows of motor vehicle parts in the second half of 1988 the overall manufacturing trade balance would have deteriorated further. Canada continues to be strong in first-stage manufacturing and resource exports with a trade surplus of $16 billion in 1988.

Manufacturing Balance Sheets

Exhibit 16

Exchange Rate Movements

(1981 = 100)



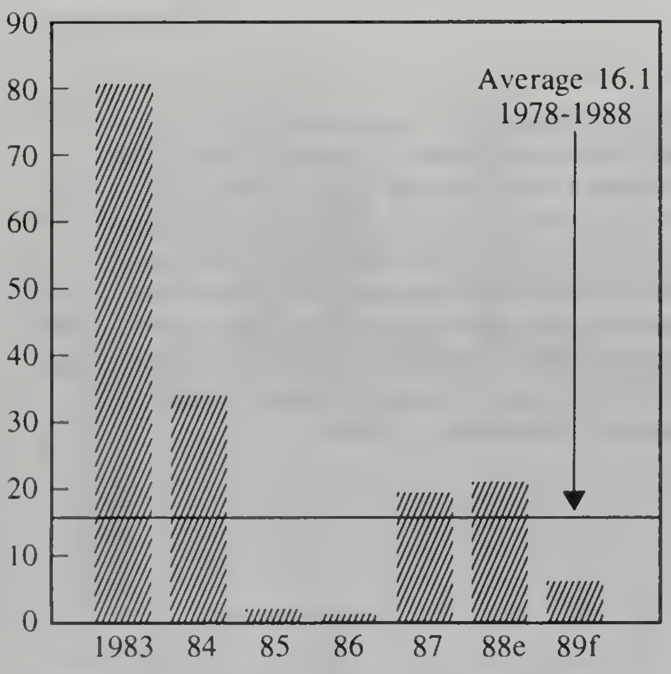
(2) The Canadian dollar in U.S. funds in 1981 = .8340
(1) Major Industrial Countries including U.S. in 1981 = 73.4

Currency swings have been responsible for most of the turn-around in trade. In November, 1988, the Canadian dollar versus the U.S. dollar was 11 per cent above its 1985 level but down substantially against the currencies of other major industrial countries. With the expectation of further devaluation of North American currencies on world exchange markets, export growth to off-shore markets will continue to be strong.

Exhibit 17

Manufacturing After Tax Profits*

(percent change)

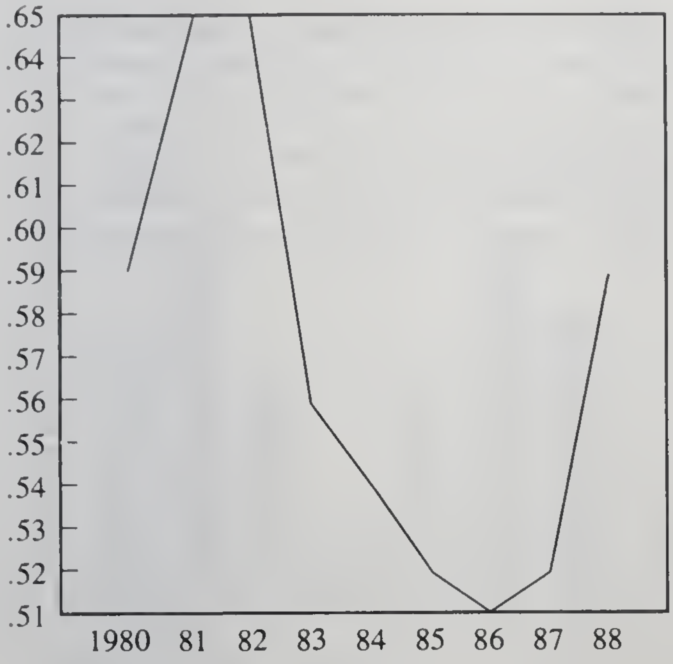


Notes: e = estimate, f = forecast, *Based on Sales.
Source: CMA Economics Department
(based upon data from Statistics Canada)

Strong economic growth in 1988 substantially improved profit performance, the effects of the 1982 recession linger heavily in the minds of most manufacturing executives and along with the stock market crash of October 1987 keep manufacturing operations lean and profitable. Employment levels have been kept in check and inventories under better control and as a result profit margins have improved substantially.

Exhibit 18

Manufacturing Debt to Equity (Ratio)*



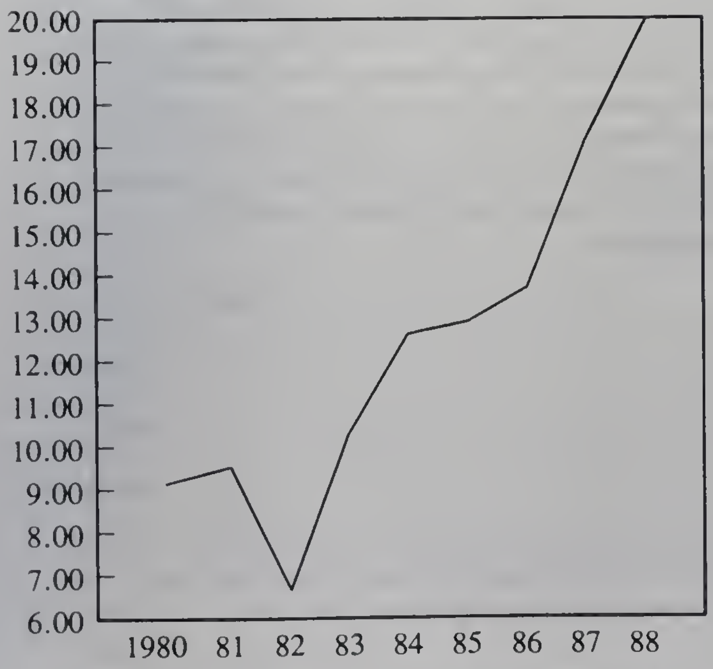
*Corporations with $10 million or more in assets

Since the 1982 recession manufacturers have spent much of their time trying to reduce their debt levels as well as adding to their equity base. The net effect has been a substantial reduction in the debt to equity ratio ultimately improving the financial health of the manufacturing sector. The stock market crash in October of 1987 virtually halted companies from raising new equity in the capital market explaining most of the increase in the debt equity ratio in 1988.

Exhibit 19

Manufacturing Operating Cash Flow*

($ Billions)



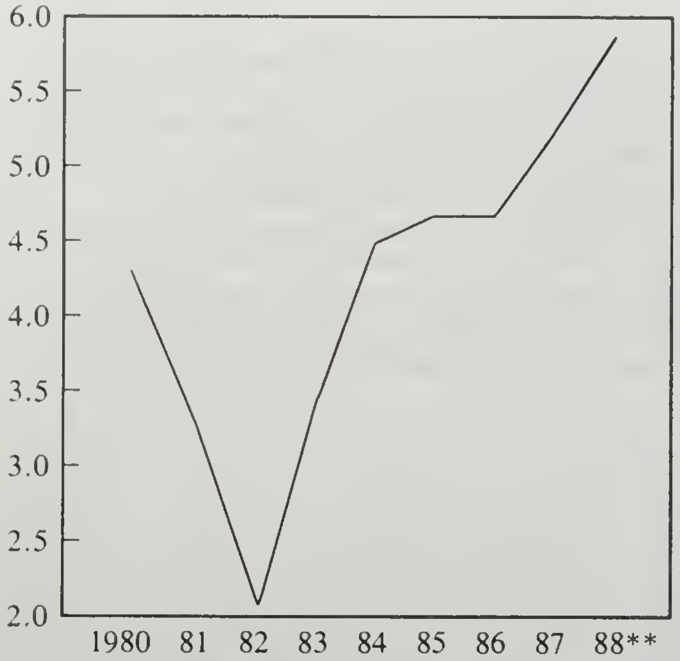
*Corporations with $10 million or more in assets 1988 is second quarter data

One of the major factors contributing to capital investment growth is higher operating cash flow. In fact most capital investment put in place during the past five years has been financed internally. Although the increase in after tax profits is forecast at 6 per cent for 1989 the level of cash flow should still remain high to continue to finance major capital investment programs.

Prices

Exhibit 20

Interest Coverage (Ratio)*



*All manufacturing corporations
1988 is second quarter data

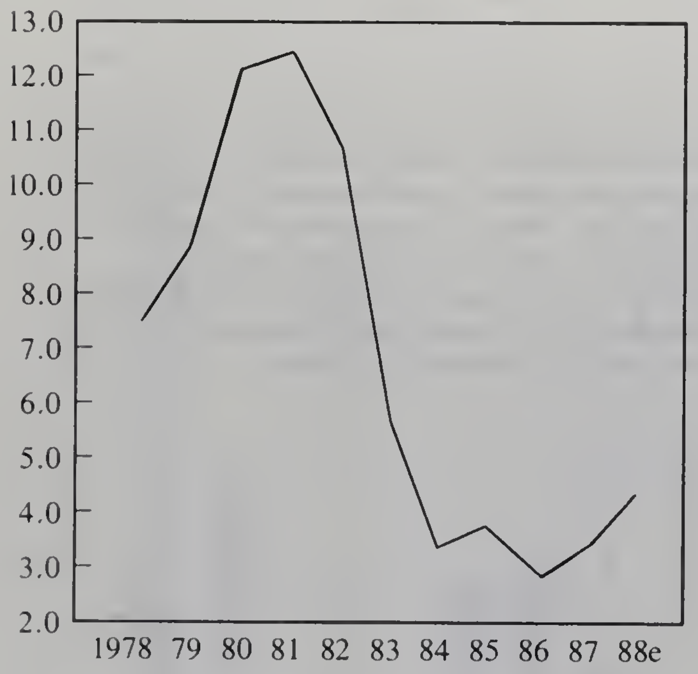
Companies are taking advantage of strong earnings performance by paying down debt. Interest rates coverage ratio has gone from a low of two to the current level of close to six. Even at high interest rates, and if the economy continues at a modest pace, the manufacturing sector has the capacity to increase borrowing to facilitate capital investment.

Exhibit 21

Manufacturing Wage Settlements*

(percentage change)



Note: e = estimate

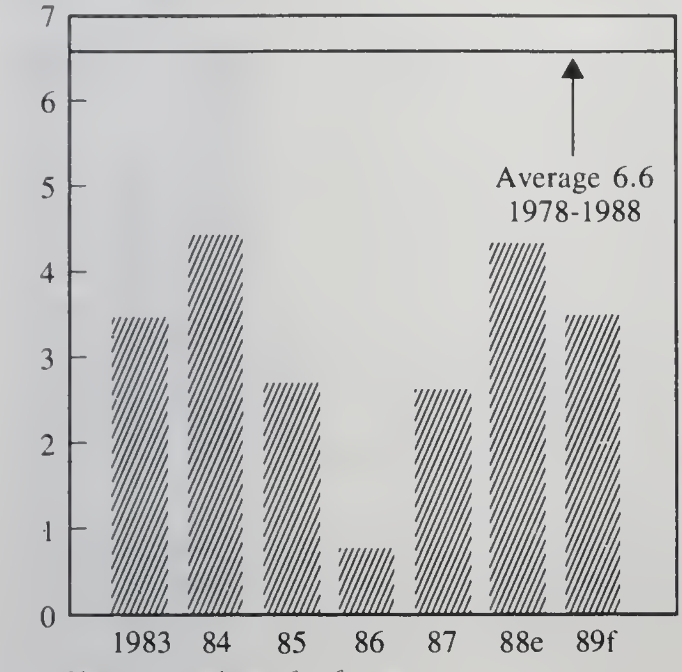
*Excluding COLA compound average annual increase in base rate (%)

With the economy now in its seventh year of expansion and plants operating at capacity the pressure on wage rates is rising. This is most evident in Ontario where the inflation rate of about five per cent is putting pressure on businesses to match or do better than five per cent. 1989 wage settlements are not likely to exceed five per cent because of rising commodity prices and the high Canada/U.S. exchange rate.

Exhibit 22

Industry Selling Prices

(percent change)



Notes: e = estimate, f = forecast

After falling below 1 per cent in 1986 industry selling price rose 7 per cent in 1987 and 4.4 per cent in 1988. Higher prices are a response to increased input costs from substantially higher commodity prices. The increase in the Canada/U.S. exchange rate of about 15 per cent in the past two years is also a factor. However, most of these costs are not being passed on and industry selling price increases will remain low in 1989.

Relative Export Prices of Manufactured Goods

Indices, 1982 = 100

	1986	1987	1988	1989
United States	86	76	70	70
Japan	118	118	123	124
Germany	104	107	103	103
France	107	108	108	107
United Kingdom	95	96	103	104
Italy	103	102	101	101
Canada	101	103	107	107

Rising export prices reflect a strong demand for first stage, high value added manufacturing products, such as refined minerals, pulp and paper, lumber and steel. Because of the excessive devaluation of the U.S. dollar prices for U.S. manufactured goods are substantially below other countries and more competitively priced.

Competitiveness

Exhibit 24

Competitiveness Manufacturing

(1977 = 100, percent change)

	CANADA	U.S.A.	JAPAN
Output	2.3	2.4	6.2
Employment	−0.1	−1.2	1.0
Output Per Hour	2.2	3.4	5.1
Compensation (National Currency)	7.5	5.7	4.5
Compensation (U.S.$)	5.8	5.7	10.0
Unit Labour Cost (National Currency)	5.2	2.2	−0.6
Unit Labour Cost (U.S.$)	3.6	2.2	4.7

Canada has a significant productivity gap with the U.S. and other major industrial countries. The recent rise in the Canada/U.S. exchange rate has put unit labour costs as high as the U.S. Unless major productivity gains are made in the coming years Canadian manufacturing will become uncompetitive.

Exhibit 25

Manufacturing Competitiveness 1987

(level 1977 = 100)

	CANADA	U.S.A.	JAPAN
Output	129.9	130.7	184.1
Employment	106.2	97.4	106.1
Output Per Hour	121.5	132.4	170.5
Compensation (National Currency)	211.4	185.1	161.1
Compensation (U.S.$)	169.4	185.1	298.3
Unit Labour Cost (National Currency)	174.0	139.7	94.5
Unit Labour Cost (U.S.$)	139.4	139.7	175.0

Two major elements that have a significant bearing on Canada's competitive ability are productivity and unit labour costs. Even though there has been significant improvement in these factors since 1980 the evidence suggests that our performance is not keeping pace with our major trading partners. If we do not improve the growth rates of these competitive factors, our ability to expand exports will be severely constrained.

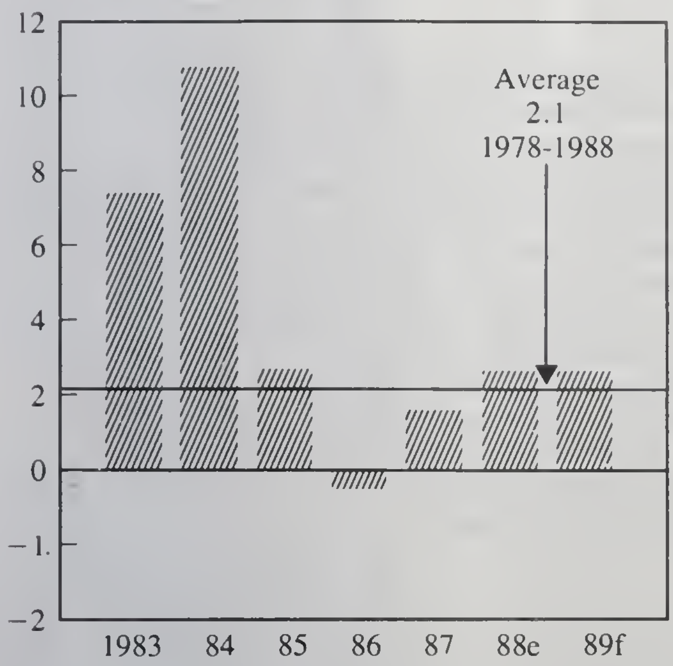
Exhibit 26

Manufacturing Productivity — Output per person employed
(percent change)



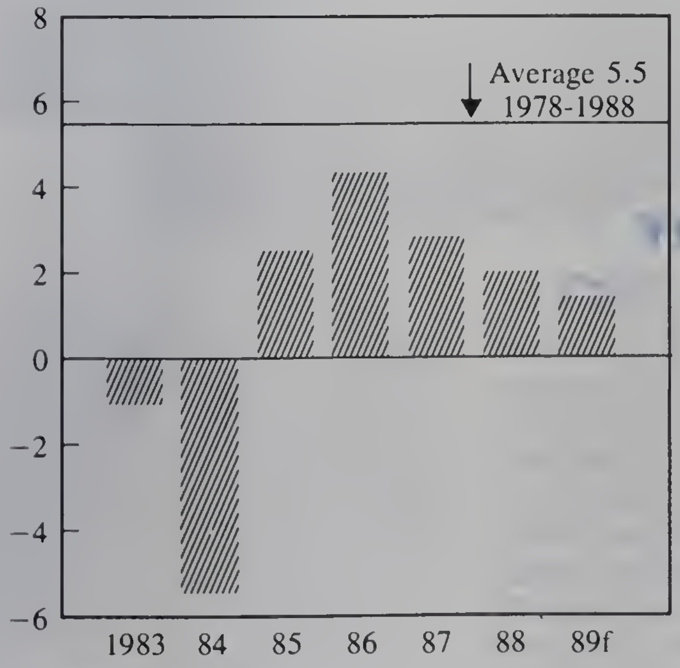
Notes: e = estimate, f = forecast, *Based on Sales.
Source: CMA Economics Department
(based upon data from Statistics Canada)

The increase in manufacturing production averaged 4.6 per cent during the past four years, while productivity performance has only averaged 2.1 per cent, substantially below the ten year average of 2.6 per cent. Some improvement is expected in 1989 however, our relative performance has not kept pace with the United States, Japan, Korea and Taiwan.

Exhibit 27

Manufacturing Unit Labour Costs

(percent change)

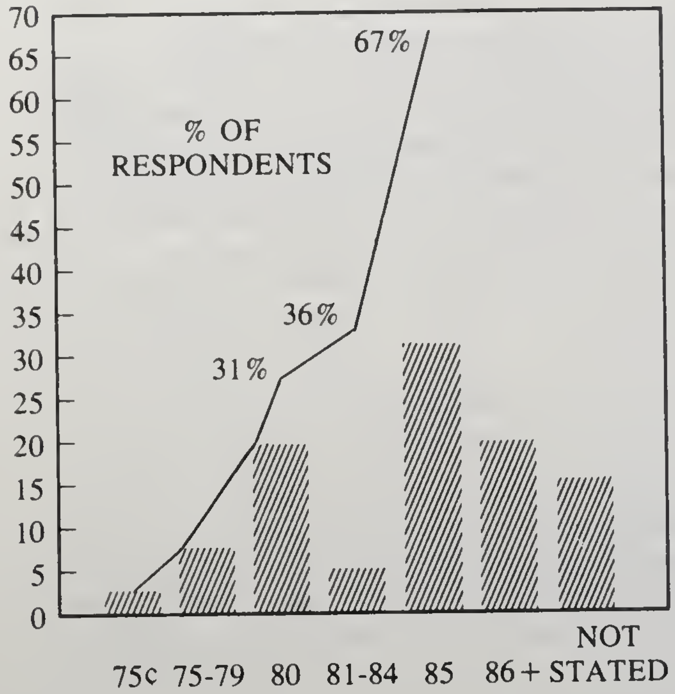


Notes: f = forecast

Even though unit labour cost growth since the 1982 recession has been well below the average of the previous ten years, comparable costs in other countries is much lower than ours especially in the U.S. More recently on a U.S. currency basis our unit labour cost grew substantially in 1987 and 1988. Labour costs are an important competitive element and substantial increases during the past few years are forcing further adjustments to absorb this increased cost.

Exhibit 28

Value of Canadian Dollar Resulting in Competitive Disadvantage



Source: CMA Survey

There is compelling evidence that manufacturers have real difficulty in competing in the U.S. when the exchange rate is at .85 cents U.S. When the Canadian dollar reaches this level about 70 per cent of Canadian manufacturers' competitiveness is seriously affected. At .86 cents the percentage is as high as 90 per cent. If the level of the Canadian dollar were determined by basic competitive fundamentals such as productivity growth, unit labour cost performance and inflation factors the Canada/U.S. exchange rate would likely be .80 cents U.S. or less. In the long run these factors will prevail, however, in the short term the exchange rate could exceed .85 cents.
